

(Use this introduction if you have not seen Neil speak before)

Please read the introduction as written. It relates directly to points Neil will cover during his presentation.

---

Regardless of your job description, none of us are immune to the influences of a changing - and often challenging - workplace. And success, however you define it, can be somewhat elusive.

I am honored to introduce you to an individual who will help unravel the mysteries of success. Few people can speak about the behavioral components of life and work with the insight and humor as our speaker - Neil Dempster. His "Don't do what's safe - do what's right" message has been applauded by tens of thousands of people both nationally and internationally.

Neil's educational background includes Mechanical Engineering and Business Administration, and he is currently completing his Ph.D. in Industrial and Organizational Psychology. This unique educational blending has earned him the distinction of bringing "logic to soft skills."

Among his many achievements, Neil was recently named a Certified Speaking Professional, the highest earned designation from the National Speakers Association. This distinction is held by less than ten percent of professional speakers worldwide.

From what I understand about Neil's delivery style, "it's time to fasten your seatbelt" because Neil has a real passion about the behavioral components of success - a topic I'm sure we can all relate to!

Please join me in welcoming . . . Neil Dempster!